AMPHORA WINES

Navis Mysterium “Brodska tajna”

0,75 l 3.900,00 kn

On the sunny slopes of the Pelješac peninsula, with great care and love, a top class plavac Edivo is produced... After the noble wine has been poured into bottles, it is placed in a clay amphora and lowered to a depth of 18 to 25 meters. They are all properly stored, placed on the cap and scattered on several locations in the sea at the Pelješac peninsula. The wine is in bottles for three months, and in the sea depths from one to two years...

The result of that are ideal thermal conditions, and on the outside of the amphora, algae, corals and all the inhabitants of the outouched underwater are caught. Natural cooling in ideal conditions has improved the quality.

Try and see for yourself and take home this unique souvenir from the sea depths.

Even the old Greeks transported wine in amphoras (amphorae vinariae). It is the Adriatic sea where the most wine amphoras have been found. Wine amphoras were mostly of elongated shape, and on the inside, they were coated with a thin layer of resin. The resin coating protected the inner walls from the permeability. And it gave this wine a specific and noble taste of pines.

The life of Greeks was interspersed with wine which often received cultural significance. It also had its own god – Dionysus. It is particularly celebrated in vineyard areas. And thanks to its character, beauty and power of the cult rites, Dionysus was a favourite deity of the people ...
